

Contents

1	Introduction	3
1.1	Mission Statement	3
1.2	Principles	3
2	Basic Information	4
2.1	Allowed Content	4
2.2	Restrictions	5
2.2.1	No swearing/profanity	5
2.2.2	No obscenity/pornography	6
2.2.3	No foreign languages or chat/“leet” speak	6
2.2.4	No spamming	7
2.2.5	No trading or selling posts	7
2.2.6	No intellectual property (IP) violations	7
2.2.7	No software cracks	7
2.2.8	No excessive points values in army lists or discussions	7
2.2.9	No off topic discussions	8
2.3	Disruptive behavior	8
2.3.1	No threadomancy/necro-posting	8
3	Membership Rules	9
3.1	Accounts	9
3.2	Names	9
3.3	Avatars	10
3.4	Private Messaging and E-mail	10
3.5	Gender and Preferred Pronouns	11
4	Membership Benefits	12
4.1	User Groups	12
4.1.1	Administratum	12
4.1.2	Moderator	13
4.1.3	Custodes	13
4.1.4	Frater Domus	13
4.1.5	Moderati Cedo	13
4.1.6	Sacristan	14
4.1.7	Codiciers and Lexicaniums	14
4.2	Signatures	14

4.3	Intent	14
4.4	Advertising	14
5	Corrective Action	16
5.1	Warnings	16
5.2	Bannings	18
5.3	Warning Reduction	18
5.4	Thread Closure	19
5.5	The Report Function	20
6	Projects & Special Projects	20
7	3D Printing	21
8	Contacting the Administrators	21

List of Figures

1	List of appropriate topics and content.	5
---	---	---

List of Tables

1	The B&Cd Principles	3
2	Reasons for name change request to be rejected.	10
3	Examples of sponsors for contests.	15
4	Main methods for advertising allowed on B&Cd	15
5	Graduated steps for warnings and consequences for breaking the rules.	17

1 Introduction

Welcome to the Bolter & Chainsword

Before participating here, make sure that you have read the following rules; and make sure to follow them when you participate.

All of the rules that follow are built upon the foundation of the mission statement and our principles. Note that many of our forums have additional guidelines (which are also built upon our mission statement), and you should be sure to read them also before posting.

The most important thing to understand is the purpose of the B&Cd as expressed in our mission statement:

1.1 Mission Statement

The B&Cd exists to help the members of a global hobby community to better understand, engage in, and enjoy all aspects of the Warhammer 40,000 hobby through constructive discussion and the sharing of hobby-related content.

1.2 Principles

The principles by which the Bolter & Chainsword operates:

- We are all here united by our common enjoyment of the hobby.
- We are all here as equals.
- The differences between us neither define us nor divide us.
- The differences make us stronger as individuals and as a community.
- This site, this community, welcomes all hobbyists.

Table 1: The B&Cd Principles

These rules are basic common sense stuff here folks and we don't think we are asking too much for everyone to follow them. If you have concerns or questions about any of the rules please contact the forum moderator(s), the custodes, or the administrators.

Thanks!

2 Basic Information

The site is structured around the current edition of the Warhammer 40,000 game, but all games set in the Warhammer 40,000 game universe are supported here.

In addition, while much of the core language used here is based around the core faction of Space Marines for which the site was first created, all factions of the Warhammer 40,000 game universe may be discussed here.

2.1 Allowed Content

The B&Cd promotes constructive discussion about all aspects of the Warhammer 40,000 hobby. While the most recognizable content is the discussions, the term “content” applies to everything available here, including galleries, downloads, signatures, status updates, etc.

This is a public forum that is viewed by members from a wide range of age groups and cultural backgrounds. Please be considerate of others when composing your content (content includes posts, private messages, emails, reports, etc.). Appropriate topics include, but are not limited to:

1. modeling and painting
2. army composition/list building
3. tactics and game play
4. rules queries
5. battle reports
6. background (also known as “lore” or “fluff”)
7. official products (models, games, books, etc.)
8. Warhammer 40,000 and Games Workshop events
9. fan fiction and artwork
10. et cetera

Figure 1: List of appropriate topics and content.

2.2 Restrictions

Since our intent is for constructive discussion among fellow hobbyists from around the world and across all age groups, there are some restrictions in place to keep the forum a fun and safe place to discuss the hobby.

2.2.1 No swearing/profanity

Anything that can be said via swearing/profanity can be expressed in other terms, often far more articulately. Many words/terms are automatically filtered by the board software, replacing them with acceptable substitutes. Note that the “no swearing/profanity” rule includes all forms and mediums - written, oral (i.e., videos with audible profanity), visual (e.g., graphics with legible profanity) - and similarly includes abbreviations and substitutions (i.e., using alternate characters) as well as obscene gestures. If you feel that swearing/profanity is the only way to accurately express yourself, a number of emoticons are available, especially “cuss” emoticon `:cuss:`.

`:cuss:`

2.2.2 No obscenity/pornography

Sexually graphic content, whether written, audible, or visual, has no place here. Similarly, links to sexually graphic content are forbidden here. Posting obscenity/pornography or links to such content will subject you to summary banning from the site. Note that there is room for some material that might be considered suggestive, generally where the followers of Slaanesh are concerned. Examples include some models and artwork (e.g., portrayals of daemonettes). The lines here are highly subjective, however, and discretion is advised. When in doubt, either don't post such material or contact an administrator/moderator first. No disrespectful behavior (trolling, flaming, derogatory terms)

Trolling is being a jerk on the internet simply because you can. This is typically unleashing one or more cynical or sarcastic remarks on someone else, because it's the internet and, hey, you can (because they can't punch you in the face through the computer, even if you deserve it). Another form of trolling is posting material simply to provoke a negative response from others. Flaming is engaging in or deliberately provoking heated argument online, usually involving personal attacks. Derogatory terms are generally terms used to insult someone else, often on the basis of gender, sexual orientation, ethnicity, nationality, spiritual/religious beliefs, etc. None of these types of behaviors are conducive to constructive discussion. There are going to be times when you disagree with someone and/or when you dislike someone or something, but you either need to express yourself constructively or you need to ignore/stay out of the discussion.

You don't have to actually respect everyone and everything, but you must treat them with respect here at the B&Cd.

Just remember Wheaton's Law and live by it. :wink:

2.2.3 No foreign languages or chat/"leet" speak

Our members come from around the world and all age groups. The intent of discussion here is for everyone to be able to participate. This site is an English language site (we don't all talk good English, mind you :wink:). Using foreign languages or things like chat/"leet" speak prevent many of our members from understanding, so they are not allowed. We don't expect perfect English, however, so please be understanding. Conversely, be tolerant of different styles of communication. Some of us are simply more blunt than others, and this is sometimes due to cultural norms (especially those of us from low context societies) and not necessarily because we're jerks.

2.2.4 No spamming

Spam isn't simply multiple identical posts across the forums, it also includes pointless, off-topic or smart-alec posts anywhere on the board. Remember, the B&Cd is here to promote constructive discussion of the 40K hobby and anything not contributing to this may be considered spam and deleted. Repeat offenders may also be subject to corrective action for such behaviour.

2.2.5 No trading or selling posts

Trading and selling aren't bad in and of themselves, but we don't want the drama that comes when trades or sales go bad.

The exception to the above is that members may identify sales/trade offerings via their signatures, allowing follow-on contact via PM or e-mail. The B&Cd accepts no responsibility or liability for such transactions, however.

2.2.6 No intellectual property (IP) violations

We enforce whatever Games Workshop allows with regard to usage of their IP. This applies to all Games Workshop products and subsidiaries. Refer to Games Workshop's website for their IP guidance.

Where third parties are concerned, we will similarly enforce whatever they provide with regard to using their IP. Again, refer to their sites.

When in doubt, less is better.

2.2.7 No software cracks

Whether requested or offered, software cracks are expressly forbidden here. This applies to any form of Warez or illegal downloading of any software, but particularly that related to GW Games will result in an immediate ban on your account.

2.2.8 No excessive points values in army lists or discussions

This means that you may not post Army Builder print outs (or those from similar products) or fully detailed points/stats for your army lists. Keep it simple, such as “Chapter Master; Terminator armour, storm bolter, thunder hammer; 285 pts” or similar.

2.2.9 No off topic discussions

We’re here to discuss the hobby, not politics, nationalism, religion, sexuality or moral/ethical debates (or cars, or sports, or the latest movie, etc.).

2.3 Disruptive behavior

Disruptive behavior, even when it does not break forum rules, is grounds for warnings and further corrective action. While we welcome constructive criticism and certainly do not expect everyone to love GW, if all you ever post is negativity, off topic posts or anything else that consistently disrupts discussions, then your posts and privileges will be dealt with accordingly. Such action includes the full range of official corrective action, including banning.

2.3.1 No threadomancy/necro-posting

If a thread has not had a post in over 90 days please DO NOT post to bump that thread back up unless you are the OP and are adding to your original thread. Asking when the next update from the OP is or saying “cool” (or something similar) does nothing for the thread. In all likelihood the OP hasn’t been on in all that time and won’t see it anyway. If you want to tell them “cool” or ask a question about their post then please PM them and wait for a reply. If they then go and “reactivate” their thread then you are free to start posting again. Otherwise we consider this the foul black heresy of Threadomancy (also known as “necro-posting”), and such posts will be deleted in order to let the dead stay where they belong.

Posts, signatures, private messages (PM), e-mails, and status updates that break these restrictions may be edited or deleted without notice. If you feel a post is violating the forum rules, please don’t put on a tin-moderator-badge from that new box of Cocoa Puffs you just got at the store. Simply use the REPORT button. This will notify all the mods of that particular forum of the issue.

3 Membership Rules

Anyone is able to view and read the Bolter and Chainsword forums. However, registering as a forum member opens up a host of other options and resource utilities for you.

There are a few rules in regards to user accounts that must be followed though:

3.1 Accounts

Members are allowed to have only a single account here at the B&Cd. If you create multiple accounts and get caught, the most recent account(s) will be deleted. Accounts may not have objectionable names, and account names are subject to change if they throw the formatting of the board off. Also, usernames that impersonate influential members of the hobby (GW employees, well-known artists, or even the staff here at the B&Cd) are not allowed and will be deleted. Further disciplinary action may be taken if the staff think it is appropriate.

3.2 Names

When you sign up for an account at the B&Cd you are asked to create a USERname and a DISPLAYname: USERname - This is the name by which you'll log in to the site. DISPLAYname - This is the name that will be visible to other members and will often be the "identity" you establish here. Most characters (letters, numbers, special characters) can be used in both names. However, if your DISPLAYname ends with a number or special character, the member BBCode won't work properly (follow the link for an explanation). Note that spaces can be included in your DISPLAYname (as in mine), so you don't have to use underscores if you don't want to.

Your USERname and DISPLAYname do not have to be the same. Think carefully on what you want your DISPLAYname to be. We rarely change a member's DISPLAYname without good reason.

Typical reasons for changing a DISPLAYname are:

Name is too long and throwing off thread formatting. This is usually fixed by simply adding spaces or removing underscores. Name contains offensive material. Name is too close to another user's name. If confusion is caused by your name being close to an existing member's name, you may be asked to change it. Misspelling. Sometimes in the rush to register an account a user might hit the wrong key and wind up doing something like spelling Rogue as Rouge. In cases like this we can often fix that with a quick reset of the DISPLAYname. This may not be possible if there is already a DISPLAYname like it on the forums. In that case you will be asked to choose a new DISPLAYname. A DISPLAYname impersonates an important person in the hobby, typically a member of Games Workshop's staff (including associated companies such as Black Library and Forge World). Reasons that a name change is usually turned down include but are not limited to:

- I'm bored with this name.
- I don't play this army anymore and want to change.
- I named myself after a character who is now dead.

Table 2: Reasons for name change request to be rejected.

3.3 Avatars

These provide members with a means of personalizing their posts, as well as giving other members an immediate visual identifier. The B&Cd has a number of "stock" avatars available through the Control Panel. Avatars can also be linked from members' galleries (please link only from your own gallery, not other members' galleries) and web sites. There are also blank templates available so that members can personalize avatars via our DOWNLOADS area. You can have pretty much any image you wish as your avatar. Avatars which violate board rules by being inappropriate will be removed and the user notified. Repeated notifications may result in a warning being issued.

3.4 Private Messaging and E-mail

You can send private messages (PMs) and e-mails to other members of the B&Cd. While the board has little control over the content of these messages, you are still expected to abide by the forum rules with regard to content and how you treat your fellow members. Using the PM and email features in ways that violate board rules (including flaming, advertising, etc.) is subject to appropriate punishment.

3.5 Gender and Preferred Pronouns

As our principles make clear, this community promotes inclusivity. Ultimately, one's gender [identity], sexual orientation, etc. are irrelevant and inconsequential. For most members, the persona and identity will be recognized based on a combination of display name and avatar - who a member is on the other side of the screen generally doesn't matter. Members whose names and avatars convey a masculine gender will generally be thought of and referred to by male pronouns, whereas members whose names and avatars convey a feminine gender will generally be thought of and referred to by female pronouns. In cases where the name and avatar don't convey a specific gender, the habit of most members, especially based on the demographics of the hobby community, will be to use masculine pronouns.

Some members, however, have preferred pronouns by which they would like to be called. To facilitate this, members may identify the pronouns by which they would like to be referred via their profile. This choice will appear in the member's profile at the left. If you believe that list is insufficient, please contact the administrators and provide links to multiple credible websites that support your argument for additions.

Members who do not wish to identify preferred pronouns may leave this field blank, in which case it will not appear in the profile.

IMPORTANT: Identification of preferred pronouns is a request. While all members are encouraged to use the pronouns that a member has identified when referring to that member, no one will be compelled to do so. The recommended alternative to using the pronouns that a member has identified is to use the member's display name.

If someone uses pronouns other than those that you have identified, your alternatives are to either send a polite private message reminding the member of your preferred pronouns and requesting that they edit their post, or ignore the use of other pronouns (some members disagree with the non-traditional pronouns and may refuse to use them). Sending multiple/repeat messages is not advised - a member that continues to use pronouns other than those that have been identified probably disagrees with the concept.

In general, use of pronouns other than those that have been identified will not be considered a disciplinary issue, nor will those pronouns be edited [by the moderators/administrators] unless the member that posted them chooses to edit them. Reports about such "misgendering" will not be acted upon unless the use of other pronouns is coupled with other behaviors that are clearly disrespectful (in this, note the difference between disrespect and disagreement).

The B&Cd is not a battleground for this conflict. The rules and capabilities of the site facilitate the identification and use of preferred pronouns, but not the compulsory use of preferred pronouns.

4 Membership Benefits

TBD...

4.1 User Groups

There are several user groups that make up the membership of the B&Cd. A users group will remain constant no matter how many posts or how old the account is. The only way your user group will change is if you are asked to be a moderator. Your account still may change based off various permissions masks set up for group functions like world wide campaigns and the Arena of Death, but those will not change your visible user group.

4.1.1 Administratum

The Administratum (administrators) are the board members who take care of the day-to-day operations of the board. This includes approving new accounts, account edits and corrections, general forum trouble shooting and where necessary disciplinary actions. Admins set board policy and dispense the highest levels of discipline when it arises (banning, removing a ban, deleting an account, etc.)

The Admin Group includes Brother Argos who is the site owner. If you have any issues with mods please contact an admin first but if you'd rather not speak to an admin then Brother Argos is who you need to contact.

4.1.2 Moderator

These are active moderators on the site. They are charged with helping things to run smoothly within their assigned forums. Moderators are participants first and policemen second. They would prefer to just discuss their chosen army, but if necessary, will issue warnings and take other actions as necessary. Outside of their assigned forums, a moderator is just like any other member of the board.

4.1.3 Custodes

These are back up for the Moderati. The Custodes are essentially global moderators, but their primary duty is to pour water on any hot spots that may flare up until a moderator can arrive. This generally means turning a thread/post invisible to the public until that forum's mods can take a better look at it. They do have the ability to issue warnings, however, should an infraction require it.

Moderati and Custodes enforce the board policy as determined by the Administratum.

4.1.4 Frater Domus

This is the most important member group, and the largest. This group is made up of the every day users of the website and is the group you are assigned to upon completing registration. Without the Frater Domus members, there would be no B&Cd.

4.1.5 Moderati Cedo

These are forum members who were moderators at one time in their past, but who have retired from active moderator duty. While they hold no position of authority you can consider them to be old hands that can assist you with questions and can help get word to the current moderators should the need arise. If they suggest you are acting out of line, you would do well to heed their call.

4.1.6 Sacristan

These are members who are responsible for the technical upkeep of the site.

4.1.7 Codiciers and Lexicaniums

These are members who were tasked with managing the Librarium and its discussion forum. The Librarium no longer exists, however, and these members are treated in much the same way as Moderati Cedo.

4.2 Signatures

Signatures may include images up to 990 pixels in width by up to 100 pixels in height and up to ten lines of text. See below for details on both.

4.3 Intent

TBD?

4.4 Advertising

You may have noticed there are no banner ads on the B&Cd. Nor is there an 'advertise your site here' section to the forums. This isn't because the B&Cd doesn't like other sites or stores. In fact we believe those to be an important part of the overall 40k Community.

We even have some Bolter and Chainsword contest sponsors that we mention every chance we get:

- Fighting Pirannha Graphics
- DragonForge Design

Table 3: Examples of sponsors for contests.

What we don't want, however, is members having to sift through pages of advertisements or flashy banner ads just to get to content on the site. As such, advertising is only allowed as follows:

Content that you would like to advertise must be related to the Warhammer 40,000 hobby, which includes general miniatures tabletop wargames. So commission painting services, appropriately scaled scenery, custom dice, and other things are appropriate. Online auctions are only allowed in your signature. Also, advertising external sites will only be permitted if they don't use adult language/content.

There are two ways that you may advertise here at the B&Cd:

- The first way is to request permission to make a topic through a moderator or administrator. If permission is granted, it is generally along with the instructions to start a single topic (or add to your existing advertising topic), no bumping, and from then on out simply include a link in your signature. This is so we can review the content of the site and make sure it isn't something objectionable being posted. Some things such as commission painting services, third party bit/model sources, and podcasts may be allowed to post updates, as long as the update material is appropriate to the B&Cd.
- The second way is to have links to your store/auctions/forums/etc. in your signature so long as they are not large size text or otherwise obtrusive to general posting. It is at moderators discretion to edit or removed links if they find the material to be questionable.

Table 4: Main methods for advertising allowed on B&Cd

Making an advertising topic/post without permission will subject your topic/post to Exterminatus and its removal from the site.

Using the B&Cd's private message or e-mail functions to advertise your own site is not allowed. Such a practice is essentially using the resources of the B&Cd for other web sites and is inappropriate. Violations of this will result in appropriate disciplinary action.

As far as other sites are concerned, we fully support other sites, even those that could be considered “competition”. Different sites cater to different players, and no one site can hope to cater to all players. The Internet allows for a lot of freedom and variety, and any site that furthers the WH40K game and gaming community deserves the chance to succeed.

5 Corrective Action

Remember that posting at the B&Cd (or any other forum for that matter) is a privilege, not a right. Those who abuse the privilege will find that privilege revoked. You aren’t required to like the rules, but you are required to follow them.

Corrective action is taken by Moderators, Custodes, or Administrators (the “staff”) when a member has broken the rules of the B&Cd.

Wherever possible, the staff enforces board policy through guidance and example. If violations are identified, the staff will take the appropriate action. This action might be a warning in the thread, editing replies in order to remove the violation, or sending a message by PM or e-mail. Deletion of posts will be taken only when necessary.

The staff may also turn a thread/post invisible for a time to get feedback from other Moderators on whether an issue requires a warning or simple redirection.

Getting a PM from a mod doesn’t necessarily equate to a warning. Many times a moderator will PM a person who is breaking the rules and both identify the problem behavior as well as provide guidance that the member should refrain from doing it in the future. Official warnings will ALWAYS be accompanied by a PM stating which rule(s) has been broken and the fact that you’ve been officially warned for your actions.

These PMs will detail the infraction and the course of action being taken against your account.

5.1 Warnings

In general, progression of warnings will be as follows:

- 1st Warning - Warning PM We consider this just a 'nudge'. You've broken a rule. Don't do it again or more severe penalties will be applied.
- 2nd Warning - 3 day suspension of posting The offender can still see the board, but they cannot post during their suspension.
- 3rd Warning - 7 day suspension of posting, followed by 7 days on Moderator Preview The offender can still see the board, but they cannot post during their suspension. Whilst on Moderator Preview, any post made by the offender must be approved by a Moderator before it becomes visible to other members, this allows us to ensure the rules are being followed properly by the offender.
- 4th Warning - 14 day suspension of account The offender can neither see nor post to the board. 30 days moderator preview.
- 5th Warning - Permanent ban At this point you have broken the rules enough and been given enough second chances that your presence on the B&Cd is no longer welcome. Your account will be banned within 48 hours.

Table 5: Graduated steps for warnings and consequences for breaking the rules.

The Administrators reserve the right to take any disciplinary action they deem necessary, including actions outside the chain listed above and banning members with fewer than 5 Warnings as and when they deem necessary.

People that are banned may be allowed back at the discretion of the Administratum. During a set period of time, these previously banned people will be given the ++PENITENT++ title. This title is temporary and indicates that the individual is on probation. Any infraction made during the probation period will have serious repercussions. The +PENITENT+ title is not meant as an insult to the member.

If you take issue with official action, you are invited to contact the moderator that issued the warning; and if necessary, you may contact an Administrator if you feel a warning was issued unfairly. All official warnings are logged and recorded by the software and are reviewed by the Administrators to make sure things are being done properly. This monitoring also ensures proper coaching in the event that a Moderator/Administrator makes a mistake in the course of issuing a warning and to prevent future incidents from happening again.

Normally, disciplinary action and communications will be private between the moderators/administrators and the member(s) in violation of the forum rules. While disciplinary action has a punitive aspect, the goal with disciplinary action is rehabilitative - helping the member to adjust their behavior in accordance with the expectations and standards of the community, as articulated in these rules.

5.2 Bannings

When a member is banned as a result of repeated violations of the forum rules, an announcement will be made. This will serve as notification of the ban to head off questions about the whereabouts of a member that has seemingly disappeared, as well as a demonstration that disciplinary action, though normally private between the offending member and the staff, does take place. The strategic goal with this sort of object lesson is to dissuade other members from similarly continuing to violate the forum rules. Such announcements will be immediately locked to prevent any unseemly discussion, but will remain pinned at the top of the forum for a period of time. Such announcements will be pinned in the News, Rumors, and Board Announcements forum for a period of time, but the discussions will be locked to prevent any unseemly responses. If you have any questions about a banning, you may contact the administrators.

5.3 Warning Reduction

All official warnings at the B&Cd are logged and any notes issued with the warning are also logged. In general, a warning point will automatically be removed after six months, unless additional warnings are accrued during that time.

This reduction isn't a license to go and break the rules again, however, and recidivists taking advantage of this clemency will be dealt with more severely than first time offenders.

5.4 Thread Closure

Sometimes a question is answered, the thread already has an ongoing discussion in another thread, or various other reasons that a thread may be closed without disciplinary action. This is generally just to steer the subject to ongoing discussions or close a thread from further discussion if the issue at hand has been dealt with.

Some threads get out of hand, though, or they go off topic, turn into a personal chat, or various other reasons it gets off course from what is considered acceptable at the B&Cd. Threads that break the rules of the B&Cd are subject to closure. It is at the discretion of the forum moderators as to if/when a thread will be closed as a disciplinary measure. When this situations arises, Moderators will close the thread with an explanation for the topic closure and the following image:

It is possible that the topic may be reopened later. If necessary, some posts may be edited or hidden by the moderators, or the moderators decide that folks have cooled their heels enough to get a topic back on track. You can take it up with your forum moderator if you have issue with a closing, however please remain civil if you don't agree with what has been done. Flying off the handle will not help bring your point across.

5.5 The Report Function

Inevitably, members aren't going to agree on everything. And, the Internet being what it is, people often act as if it's okay to say whatever they want because there won't be any consequences. Or sometimes someone says something that you find offensive, or that you think is inappropriate in some way.

You'll be tempted to return fire, giving tit for tat or escalating.

The site doesn't need that. Remember, the mission of the site is to help each other to enjoy the hobby. It's difficult to do that when we're getting into spats with people we don't know.

Use the REPORT button when you see something that you think needs to be addressed. This will allow you to identify a potential problem to the staff, who will then take a look, discuss whether or not there is an issue that we need to handle, and then take whatever action we deem is appropriate.

6 Projects & Special Projects

A variety of projects take place throughout the B&Cd, ranging from the development of DIYS (in the Liber forums), member PLOGS (usually in the Forge forums, but often in the faction forums), to the development of special rules (usually in the Homegrown Rules forum). Some projects are more extensive, and we often refer to them as "special projects."

Regardless of whether a project is "regular" or "special" and regardless of where it is conducted on the B&Cd we've developed guidelines in the Special Projects forum here.

In an effort to maintain consistency and currency, we're not going to re-post those rules here. Simply follow the link for the definitive set of guidelines for projects.

7 3D Printing

Wikipedia said:

3D printing is any of various processes in which material is joined or solidified under computer control to create a three-dimensional object, with material being added together (such as liquid molecules or powder grains being fused together).

3D printing is a subset of additive manufacturing.

8 Contacting the Administrators

If you need to reach an Administrator for assistance, you can contact us via your normal e-mail at:

Brother Tyler - TBD WarriorFish - TBD